6/1: Wonder Woman

We haven't had a good woman superhero standalone movie in ages! In order to break the glass ceiling, creating strong female role models on screen is an important step. And this just might be the movie even teenage boys will want to watch. Follow Diana, Princess of the Amazons, as she finds a wounded soldier on her home island. With him she decides to see what is out in the world and finds herself right in the middle of the first World War. The movie was directed by Patty Jenkins, and stars the Israeli actress Gal Gadot - also a martial artist and model - with Chris Pine and Robin Wright.

6/15: Rough Night

It seems June is the month of women lead roles! Following the success of last year's Bad Moms, this comedy also tries its luck with an all-female ensemble. This time the movie depicts a bachelorette party gone wrong - five friends come together to celebrate, but accidentally kill the male stripper. What are they going to do? Well, to find out you'll have to watch this entertaining movie, among others, with Scarlett Johansson as the bride, Zoë Kravitz and the one and only Kate McKinnon!

6/29: Despicable Me 3

The new Despicable Me movie seems to be based on a true classic Parent Trap storyline: Gru finds out, that he has a twin brother called Dru! The twins were separated after their parents divorced, only to find each other again now. They have many things in common, for example being a villain - a lifestyle Gru promised to abandon. If you love the Minions and their incomprehensible language, this is the movie for you - although this time it does seem like they go rogue and end up in jail!

6/29: Baby Driver

The movie starts with the cliché sentence "just one last job, and then I'm done!" We've definitely heard that before, but this film promises more! We see the youngest, but best driver in the business: a young boy who had an accident when he was young and can only concentrate with music in his ears. Now, he goes against his own team, who threaten to harm his darling. And as I said this movie promises more: spectacular car scenes, funny dialogs, excitement and great actors: Kevin Spacey, Jamie Foxx, Jon Hamm, Ansel Elgort just to name a few. Check it out!
